"Very Successful"

The A. N. A. Convention Auction Sale which I had the privilege of conducting, was indeed a success.

We executed bids for over 600 collectors and dealers with more than 400 being successful. Out of the 2103 Lots sold, only 32 were returned and 50% of these were not justified. One man returned two $3.00 Gold pieces because he had purchased them elsewhere and didn't want duplicates. (He won't be with us the next Sale)

Prices were very good, particularly on choice material. Proofs and the scarce mint marks brought well over catalogue, indicating a strong and upward trend in prices. Some of the outstanding prices on Proofs were 1875 $3.00 gold, $2,925.00; 1907 St. Gaudens $20.00, $850.00; 1888 $20.00, $340.00; 1850 Silver Dollar, $165.00. The 1802 Half Dime sold for $335.00; 1901 S Dime, $110.00. The Jewish Shekel, $125.00, and the Salvadore 20 Pesos, $335.00. Many of the lower priced coins brought proportionately higher prices than these.

I wish to thank the many collectors and dealers for the nice compliments received on the catalogue for the Sale. We put a lot of time effort and money to make it an outstanding one and it is most gratifying to know that we were successful.

THREE IN ONE

You are no doubt wondering why you are getting three issues of Coins & Chatter at one time. Due to circumstances beyond our control, we were unable to get the past few issues out on schedule. All coins advertised in these issues are in stock as we go to press.

ONLY $360,000 FOR CIRCULATION
IN CANADA IN 1858

In 1856 while the Bank of Upper Canada was working on a scheme for issuing and circulating a supply of new tokens or money, the government of Upper and Lower Canada forbade the issuing of new tokens or coins by banks or private concerns as they were considering the idea of a decimal system of coinage for the Canadas.

Two years later, in 1858, a one cent piece was placed in circulation, followed by silver coins of five, ten and twenty cents face value. Later crude counterfeits were made of the twenty-cent piece. The official series of silver pieces was only minted one year, 1858. Total number of coins issued was 750,000 twenty cent pieces; 1,250,000 ten cent pieces; 1,500,000 five cent pieces and 1,000,000 one cent pieces; total value of only $360,000 a sum which the government considered sufficient for the conducting of businesses in Upper and Lower Canada.

In 1859 a further 9,000,000 one cent pieces were issued.

The colonies of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick both issued coins of the decimal series about the same time. Nova Scotia issued a half-cent piece, the smallest coin ever to be legal tender in Canada. A few half-cent pieces were also struck by New Brunswick but they were never officially circulated. In 1862 New Brunswick issued three silver coins of five, ten and twenty cent denominations. A further issue of twenty cent pieces was made in 1864. Official one cent pieces were issued both by N.B. and N.S. in the years 1861 and 1864.

It was not until 1870, after Confederation, that the new Dominion of Canada issued a new coinage, the first since the trial issue of 1858-59. The denominations of the new national coinage were from one cent to fifty cents, and were struck by the mints at London and Birmingham, England. Since 1908 Canadian coins have been struck at Ottawa, and for a while at New Westminster, B.C.

THE HOLLAND RIDER

The coinage of the United Provinces during the second part of the 16th Century reflects to a surprising degree the history of those stirring times. The separation of the Dutch from the Belgian provinces, largely on political, but also on religious grounds, stimulated coinage to a considerable extent. The need for additional money for the struggle against the Spanish forces resulted not only in the enlargement of the provincial issues, but also in the occasional resort to "pieces of necessity" struck during the numerous sieges to which some of the Dutch strongholds were subjected.

Probably the best known of these sieges is that of Leyden - the hardships and relief of the stricken burghers being brilliantly described by Motley in his "Rise of the Dutch Republic." By cutting the dikes and letting in the sea, the Dutch were ultimately successful in winning their independence. The crews of hastily-refitted sailing vessels of the Hollanders were called "Sea Beggars" in derision, but they contributed in no small measure to the struggle for independence.

By the capture of the heavily-laden bullion ships of the Spaniards as they brought homeward the New World silver, the "Sea Beggars" provided what was in all probability the very metal which went into their own Dutch coins.

The "rider" coin illustrated above (slightly reduced) was issued in both gold and silver. It seems to have followed the pattern of a gold coin issued by James III of Scotland. The close connection between these two countries is brought out in Scott's novels, the Scottish youths of a warlike turn of mind were certain to find employment for their talents in the Low Countries. If they were of the Protestant party, they proceeded to Holland; if of the Catholic faith, they joined the Spanish forces.

ATTIC TETRADRACHM
ALEXANDER THE GREAT

Many Greek coins were struck in Alexander the Great's time, but we surmise that young "leopard" was too busy bounding over the earth to give much personal attention to them:

"After this I beheld, and lo another, like a leopard, which had upon the back of it four wings of a fowl; the beast had also four heads; and the dominion was given to it."
(Dan. 7:6)

We are not surprised that, when dominion was given to Alexander, being a son of a ruler who had chosen the god Zeus for his coins, he would choose to have on the obverse of his silver tetradrachm, a son of the god Zeus — the young Herakles.

Herakles is the spelling favored by students of today. The English form Hercules used to be the commonly used form.

This silver tetradrachm of Alexander III (the Great), whose reign was 336-323 B. C., was struck at Amphipolis, a then important city of Greece.

Alexander is said to have had great liking for the legend of the Nemean lion, and here the headgear of Herakles tells of that legend. Observe carefully, you will see that the head of Herakles is in the mouth of the lion; he has its strong jaws almost over his own.

This lion, according to Greek mythology, was cause of great distress; he destroyed the flocks. His skin was invulnerable -- arrows could not pierce it. Herakles bravely entered his lair, closed the entrance, and killed the lion with his own hands. Because the skin of the beast was impenetrable, Herakles tore it from the body and adopted it for headgear when in danger, his head in its jaws, its forepaws knotted about his neck, and the skin hanging down his back. It was now Herakles' defense.

The reverse of this tetradrachm represents the young Herakles' father, Zeus, nude to his waist, and sitting upon his throne. In his right hand he holds an eagle; in his left a sceptre.

Alexander's coins are sometimes called "coins of the third world kingdom." That is because of Daniel's interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dream of a "great image." By that dream God told Nebuchadnezzar that there would be four world kingdoms:

First: The glorious head of gold, the kingdom of

Nebuchadnezzar.

Second: A silver kingdom (That of Medo-Persia--a kingdom inferior to the first)

Third: A kingdom of brass.
(Greece -- that of Alexander the Great)

Fourth: A kingdom of iron and clay. (Rome)

"And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom . . . and it shall stand forever." (See Dan. 2: 36-44)

That dream and its interpretation was in 603 B.C., which was 267 years before that kingdom of Alexander's--the third world kingdom -- began.
